CURED OF KANSAS FEVER

Through the Experience of One of its Victims, Who has Just Recovered

Among the Negroes of Louisiana-A Canting Coon Wants to Teach

WASHINGTON, April 17 .- Before the exo dus committee to-day Mr. L. L. Tompkins, of Shreveport, a planter, testified that there was no difficulty in colored men, women and children getting plenty of work in that section; the blacks furnish the best labor the south bas; it is to the pecuniary interests of the whites to treat the blacks well; he had never seen any intimidation or outrages at the polls; the negroes enjoyed their civil rights in his vicinity; the credit system of doing business undoubtedly affords facilities for dis honest men to cheat ignorant laborers, white and black; the negro suffers more from im-providence than small pay; he stopped the exodus movement in his section by the ployment on his place of a negro who had been to Kansas; his description of the country cured the negroes of their emigration fever.

R T. Venson, of Shreveport, planter, had sentative Manning to report it to the house:

WHEREAS, A certain anonymous letter, dated
"House of Representative, Washington, D. C., March 4, 1880," and addressed to Wm. Springer, offering a bribe of five thousand dollars if he would prevent the unseating of Wm. D. Washburne, of Minnesota, contestee in the pending contested election of Donnelly w. Washburne, was mailed on the eighth of March, 1880, in the postoffice of the house of representatives, and delivered to said Hon. Wm. Springer, then and now chairman of the committee on elections, before which said contested election case was at that time pending; and

WHEREAS, Stald letter purports to be an attempt to corruptly influence the action of said Wm. Springer as a member of said committee of the house of representatives; and never seen any interference with the voting of negroes; one black laborer was worth five whites; if the negroes had saved their money they would own the State of Louisiana now; they spend their money at girships, ginger-cake, peanuts, etc., and the merchants cheat them out of some of it; the blacks are better off now, as a race, than when slaves; the liberal leaders except Gladstone, who is at condition of planters is not better than before Hawarden, where John Bright is visiting the war.

DEAR SIR—Your inquiry received. I am caposed to the unit role because it fetters and practically distranchises the minority. In Penpsylvania the delegales to the Matlanti convention are chosen by districts, and the State convention, flaying no hing to do with their appointment, has no power to direct the manner in which their voices shall be cast. With the four delegates at large, who are elected by the State convention, the case is, of course, different. The unit rule has proved a convenient device by which to shackie the hepublican party in Pennsylvania, and to subject it to absolute personal domination, and it is not at all desirable to engraft the practice upon the policy of the Democratic party. With us the people govern in their own way. The Lancaster resolution of 1876, to which you refer as a precedent, goes for nothing, as it had not the judgment of a full convention in its favor.
